CLAIM GREAT VICTORY FOR BRITISH FLEET

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—That a terrific battle between the German and British fleets has occurred in the North Sea, with a victory for the Armada of Britain, is the general belief here today, though the admiralty is maintaining the greatest secrecy as to the movements of its ships.

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, stated in the House of Commons this afternoon that there "had been no losses of any kind or fighting except that already officially announced."

The statement of Churchill in full was as follows:

"Apart from the loss of the small British cruiser Amphion and the German laying Koenigen Luise there has been no other fighting and no other loss as far as we are aware.

"On Wednesday a flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers, while patroling the upper reacher of the channel, found the Koenigen Luise laying mines. The destroyers pursued and sank her.

"About fifty of her crew, which probably numbered 120 or 130 men, were humanely saved by the crews of the British destroyers.

"The Amphion continued to scout with the flotilla and while on the return journey was blown up by a mine.

GOEBEN AND BRESLAU SUNK.

ROME, Aug. 7.—A wireless message intercepted by the operator of a ship here this afternoon indicates that the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau have been sunk in a battle with a British fleet off Messina today. It reads: "Both Germans sunk." The operator who intercepted it said the message was apparently sent from the vicinity of Messina to a warship off the southern coast of France.

CARMANIA SAFE WITH $11,000,000.

QUEENSTOWN, Ire., Aug. 7.—The Cunard liner Carmania, carrying $11,418,000 in gold arrived here safely today.

GERMANS KILL EACH OTHER.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 7.—Two German regiments, mistaking each other for a detachment of Belgian troops, fought a battle in the darkness east of Liege early today. Six were killed and twenty wounded before they discovered their error.

NAVAL FIGHT OFF CHINA.

MANILA, Aug. 7.—A German squadron is engaged in battle with a British cruiser off the coast of China, according to a report received here today.

DENY ULTIMATUM TO ITALY.

BERLIN, via London, Aug. 7.—Sharp denial was made by the German government today of the report that Germany had sent an ultimatum to Italy.

MYSTERY LINER DUE IN BOSTON ELUDES HOSTILE WARSHIPS

Word was received from the Hamburg-American liner Cincinnati that she is safe and will reach Boston late today or early tomorrow morning. Not a word had been heard from the liner since she left Hamburg until a brief message came today.

Great anxiety had been felt among the relatives and friends of the large number of passengers on board. These include Cardinal O'Connell, who boarded the steamer at Boulogne, France.

(A list of the Cincinnati's passengers will be found on Page 4.)

GERMANS, DRIVEN BACK BY BELGIANS, WAIT HELP

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands, Aug. 7.—Liege is burning. Shells fired by the German artillery have set fire to the Cathedral of St. Paul, the Palais De Justice, the Church of St. Jacques and the Theatre Royal. Flames also attacked the University, which is attended by many foreigners, but they were extinguished by the Students.

By BERNARD BELANCOURT.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 7.—After losing more than 15,000 killed and wounded in a three days' attack on Liege, the German army of 60,000 men under command of General Von Emmich abandoned the assault last night and retired to the left bank of the river Meuse.

There they will await reinforcements. Four hundred thousand German troops are reported on their way here from Aix-la-Chapple in two columns, one following the direct route to Liege and the second moving up the valley of the Vesdre River, which joins the Meuse at Liege.

BIG GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS.

Eighty thousand of these reinforcements have already reached Verviers. These troops are said to be under command of the German Crown Prince, who was reported yesterday to have already arrived at Liege. Six pontoon bridges have been thrown across the Meuse south of Vise, and at 5 o'clock this morning the Kaiser's troops began their advance. Though subjected to a heavy fire from Belgians, they successfully accomplished the passage of the river and moved southward, blowing up a number of railroad bridges.

Wild excitement was caused here early today by a dispatch sent from Maestricht to London and flashed here saying that Liege had capitulated.

This was immediately denied by the War Ministry, which issued an official announcement that the Germans had withdrawn after forty hours of almost continuous fighting, that the Germans had lost more than 15,000 in killed and wounded and that their artillery had failed to batter a breach in any of the Liege forts.

The attack on Liege will be resumed within a few hours. The invading forces are placing their artillery where they can direct a destructive fire upon the forts of Barchon, Evegnee and Fleron. If these forts are reduced the city will be compelled to surrender.

BELGIAN FORCE OF 80,000.

Reinforcements for the Belgian garrison are being sent to Liege as rapidly as possible. When the Germans began their attack there were only 22,000 men to resist them, but there are now about 50,000 in and immediately west of the city.

If the Germans capture Liege they will have no difficulty in taking Namur and then the route to Paris will be open. Liege and Namur control the main line of invasion into France. The former is defended by twelve forts, the total armament including supplementary batteries, being 400 guns.

Each fort has at least eight heavy guns and mortars and four quick-firing guns. The forts' main armament is in cupolas or behind armored casemates. It will require

GERMAN SPIES ARRESTED.

SYDNEY, N. S., Aug. 7.—Two German spies were arrested near the transatlantic wireless station early today. Their rooms were searched and a full wireless outfit, several bombs and a quantity of dynamite found. Additional troops were immediately summoned and placed about the wireless and cable stations. Dispatches intercepted by the wireless operators here indicate that messages have been sent to the German cruiser Dresden giving the location of French and British ships in the Atlantic.

JAPAN READY TO MOBILIZE.

TOKIO, Aug. 7, 9:30 a. m.—The reserve army officers have been instructed to hold themselves in readiness for possible mobilization. A flying squadron of seven cruisers has been organized at Yokosuka. Prince Fushimi is in command. The battleship squadron has been increased to eight vessels and is ready for service. Admiral Kato is in command.

The fortifications at Vladivostok, Asiatic Russia, and at Saigon, the French possession in China, have been strengthened to meet possible bombardment of German warships whose whereabouts are now unknown.

heavy howitzers to deal with these. They cannot be pushed, as the Seventh German Corps found in the first day's attack.

The weakness of Liege lies in the wide intervals between the forts, but for five days 50,000 laborers have been digging trenches and preparing obstacles which the Germans will be compelled to surmount before they take the city.

PRAISE FOR DEFENDERS.

"Truly they are heroes, these defenders of Liege. They had held back two German army corps for forty hours. If they had done no more they have achieved the great task of the moment.

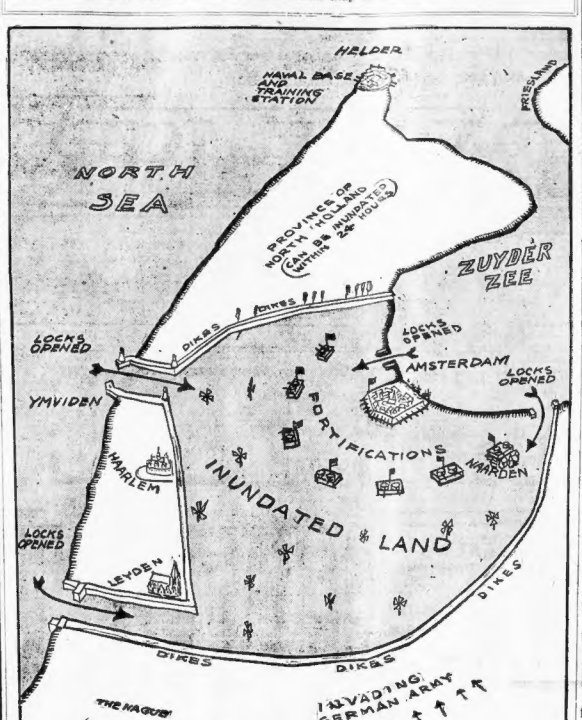
"They gained time, which was vital. Confident in their numbers, the Germans believed that no obstacle would be presented to their strategy of outflanking the French position on the eastern frontier. The unexpected fighting ability of the Belgians has upset the German plans."

VIKING SAILS AUG. 10.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 7.—The steamer Viking, which was engaged by a syndicate of Americans to carry stranded citizens of the United States home, will sail August 10, it was announced today.

HOLLAND'S NOVEL DEFENCE.

Map shows plans made by the Dutch military experts for flooding a large area of Holland to repel any German army of invasion. A number of Holland forts located on high ground command the area which may be flooded and an invasion by small boats will be practically impossible. The Hague Peace Palace, which has been deserted by the government, is a short distance from the zone which may be flooded.



ENGLAND WINS GREAT BATTLE IN NORTH SEA

"The indiscriminate use of mines not in connection with military harbors or strategic positions and the indiscriminate scattering of contact mines about the seas might, of course destroy, not only warships but peaceful merchant vessels under a neutral flag and possibly carrying supplies to a neutral country. This use of the mine is new in warfare and deserves the attentive consideration not only of those who are engaged in war, but of the nations of the civilized world.

"The admiralty is not at all alarmed or disconcerted by this incident."

In the face of the statement by Churchill comes dispatches to the effect that the British Admiralty has advised ship owners that they may send their vessels with safety anywhere in the North Sea, which, if true, would indicate that the German fleet has been disposed of. The following from Toulon also tends to confirm the report of a naval victory for England:

TOULON, France, Aug. 7 (via Paris).—The French battleship Jean Bart was ordered today to proceed to the Mediterranean at full speed. It had been held here for a week in readiness to join the British fleet if that armada suffered defeat in the North Sea and required assistance, and the order sending it to the Mediterranean is believed to have followed receipt of information from London that there was no further danger from the German warships.

The battleship France was also ordered to the Mediterranean.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Nineteen German ships are reported to have sunk in a terrific fight between the fleets of Great Britain and the Kaiser in the North Sea. It is believed that the greates sea figh in the world's history has taken place and that Great Britain has won an overwhelming victory.

The German ships that succeeded in escaping after the conflict are said to have been driven back to the mouth of the Elbe and are bottled up there.

British shippers today received official notice that they were free to send their vessels anywhere in the North Sea. This was taken as a confirmation of reports that the battle had been fought and won by England.

During the forenoon details of the reported conflict were withheld by the Admiralty with the exception of the fact that the British cruiser Amphion had been sunk, carrying down with her 151 men. Of these 131 were British sailors. Twenty were German prisoners.

The Amphion was blown up by a mine laid by the Koenigin Luize before that vessel was sunk by the British destroyer Lance on Wednesday. The captain, sixteen officers and 145 of the Amphion's crew were saved.

BATTLE OFF SOUTH DOGGER BANK.

Reports from various ports state that heavy firing was heard in the North Sea during the twenty-four hours beginning at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. It is said that at that time the German fleet and British armada came into contact off the South Dogger bank, midway between England and Denmark.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Whitby says that nineteen German ships were sunk or captured in the battle and that several British and French vessels were sunk.

This was the first intimation received that the French warships had joined those of England.

A dispatch from South Shields says: "Definite news of a great naval battle in the North Sea reached Tyneside shippers early today when the Admiralty advised ship owners that they might send vessels anywhere in the North Sea."

The Daily News has received a Newcastle dispatch timed 11 a. m. today which says that a wireless message states that the British fleet engaged the German high sea fleet in a heavy battle off the South Dogger bank and after a general engagement along a battle line extending for many miles the German fleet was beaten back and moved in the direction of the coast of Holland.

It adds that the German fleet is believed to be completely hemmed in on the eastern side of the North Sea.

FRENCH INVASION OF GERMANY HAS BEGUN

By FRANKLIN H. MERRICK,
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The French invasion of Germany began today. It was announced at the War Ministry that troops of the Republic had crossed the frontier and captured Vic and Moyenvic, small German towns in Alsace-Lorraine, about twenty miles from Nancy.

Though this is only a preliminary movement to protect the main advance of the French forces, 400,000 infantry and cavalry and an immense force of artillery are ready to cross the frontier when General Joffre gives the order.

The War Ministry confirmed reports that Holland's neutrality has been violated by German troops.

During the last three days more than 500 persons have been arrested here for creating disorder. They will be tried by court martial, the city being under martial law.

Pork Leads Rise in Food Products

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Sensational advances in hog products in Liverpool, coupled with reports that representatives of European countries were here for the purpose of buying for export, sent prices soaring in the provisions market today, hogs reaching 10 40, 25 to 20 cents higher than yesterday. Shipments of hogs that were halted several days ago, when local bankers refused credit to speculators and compelled them to operate on a cash basis, were ordered resumed today in the expectation of an active market. It was also believed that prices of beef and other food products would rise in sympathy with hogs.

STEAMER HITS MINE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 7.—The British steamer Craigforth struck a mine in the Black Sea today and had to be beached.

Wholesale Price of Sugar Advances

Retail grocers are advised today by wholesalers of a quarter-cent a pound advance in refined sugar prices, and it is probable the price to the consumer will be advanced during the day to 5¼ cents a pound, making a total advance of three-quarters of a cent a pound since Monday. No other advance in foodstuffs is anticipated for the remainder of the present week. Western advices state that flour mills are increasing their output as fast as possible to meet the unusual demand which has been suddenly created in the past week as a result of foreign war.

ASKS FOR PASSPORTS.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The French embassy received an official dispatch today stating that the Austrian ambassador at St. Petersburg had asked for his passports, Austria regarding herself at war with Russia.

PARIS HEARS GERMAN CROWN PRINCE, NOT KAISER, STARTED BIG WAR

REPORT ENRAGED WAR LORD STRUCK SON

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Crown Prince William of Germany, always bellicose, not his august father, set the nations of Europe at each other's throats, according to a graphic story which comes here from Berlin.

When the Kaiser, returning to Berlin from his cruise in Scandinavian waters, learned the position in which his belligerent heir and the war party had placed Germany—a position from which it was impossible to withdraw without compromising the Empire—he flew into a terrible rage.

Summoning the Crown Prince, his father upbraided him frightfully, and at the height of his fury actually struck his son in the face.

So overcome was the Kaiser by the force of his passion that, exhausted, he sank in a chair and the painful scene ended.

While the Kaiser was off the coast of Norway the Crown Prince busily co-operated with the most aggressive militarists. They found a way to declare war against Russia, which superficially at least, afforded a specious pretext. Returning the Kaiser found it was impossible to repudiate what had been done without humiliating himself, the Crown Prince and Empire in the eyes of his allies; indeed, of all Europe.

GARDNER TELLS OF FLIGHT FROM EUROPE

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of Essex County, Massachusetts, is just back from France with the family of his father-in-law, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, whom he rescued from Dieppe. Senator Lodge is in London. Mr. Gardner said:

"I left London Monday night for Southampton, Havre, and to Dieppe. All the gasoline outside of the cities has been commandeered by the government, so I hired two taxicabs at $30 a day, each loaded with cans of gasoline.

"There are yards of red tape connected with traveling now and you must first get a permit from the chief of police to be there at all, and then if you want to get out of the town you must get photographed and get a permit to be allowed to pass out. This with the photograph must be approved by the mayor of the city, and then you will need another permit from the general commanding the department to allow your chauffeur to circulate outside of the town. I got one set in Havre, but was forced to get an entire new second set at Dieppe for the return trip. I found Mrs. Lodge and children, Henry Cabot, 2d, John and Helena, quite safe at Villa Musette, near Dieppe. We were all photographed separately at five francs per head, which were developed in an hour and a half, thanks to a small gratuity.

"The fifties to all these documents you also need a passport to get out of France. As our boat left the wharf at Havre some 600 French soldiers in the barracks alongside sang 'God Save the King' in English. It was very touching; they evidently rehearsed it carefully in advance. The passengers on the boat replied by singing 'The Marseillaise.' It would have been very unpleasant for English-speaking people in France if England hadn't declared war. Everybody asked me anxiously if England was going to fight. Many feared that England was going to crawl. I think what probably most of us do, that the Kaiser is running amuck. When I left Dieppe, Mrs. J. S. Taylor, wife of the surgeon of the battleship Illinois, was provisioning her house outside Dieppe and planning to stay."

BRYAN SILENT ON REPLIES TO U. S. OFFER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Secretary of State Bryan today refused to discuss whether replies had been received by this government to its mediation proposals submitted to the warring European nations. That at least one reply has been received was gathered from the tenor of his conversation, but when questioned closely the Secretary refused to throw any light on the situation.

"This is such a delicate matter," said the Secretary, "involving as it does, the closest diplomatic relations between this government and others that it is a matter to be jealously guarded. I must refuse to answer any questions until the State Department can make a public announcement. At the British embassy it was stated that it was most likely the American ambassadors would send their replies direct to the State Department. At the French embassy here it was stated that the reply of that nation is expected to be 'only a polite acknowledgement of the receipt of President Wilson's offer.'

The German embassy is closed. A clerk in charge of the Austrian embassy said he has been without advices from his government for two days.

The staff of the Russian embassy is not expected to return to Washington for several weeks. Th Italian embassy at present is presided over by a caretaker.

TREASURER BURKE BEGINS WORK OF SENDING MONEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. — John Burke, treasurer of the United States, today began the work of sending money from relatives and friends in this country to Americans stranded abroad. Mr. Burke said that deposits should be sent either to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, or to the assistant treasurers at Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia, St. Louis and San Francisco. Payment will be made to the beneficiary by officials on board the U. S. S. Tennessee on its arrival in Europe, on cable advice from the department. The depositor should give his name and address and the name, address and description of the person to whom the money is sent.

He also should give the age, height, complexion and color of hair and color of the eyes of the payee. Deposits are accepted only at the risk of the owner and the receipts given for the deposits should be retained.

PROBLEM IN CARING FOR IMMIGRANTS DENIED ENTRANCE

The United States immigration bureau is facing a serious situation as a result of the temporary suspension of business by practically all the trans-Atlantic steamship lines. It is confronted with the problem of properly caring for hundreds of deharred aliens at the various Atlantic seaports, including Boston, New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia. The number is being constantly added to by the arrival of fugitive steamships.

There are 139 of these immigrants confined to the immigration station at Long wharf.

Meantime, the steamship companies that brought them must pay 50 cents a day for each immigrant at the immigration station and $1 a day for each immigrant in the hospital, until such time as they are able to transport them back to their native country.

PORTLAND BOAT HITS ROCKS; 400 ON BOARD SAFE

The steamer Bay State, which left Boston at 7 o'clock last night, went ashore today on the rocks at Portland Head, Cape Elizabeth, at the entrance to Portland harbor. Her 400 passengers were transferred to the Casco bay steamer Pilgrim and landed in Portland.

Portland Head is a rocky point at the end of which is the oldest lighthouse on the Maine coast. A thick fog hung deep all along the Maine coast early today and this caused the steamer to go ashore. She was in command of Captain Craig, who has been on the Eastern Steamship Company's Rockland service. This was his first trip on the Portland run.

The Bay State struck at 4:50 a. m. For half an hour she tried her wireless distress call, but received no answer. Then she blew distress signals by whistle and the Pilgrim came rushing to her assistance and took off the passengers at 6:10 a. m.

The revenue cutter Woodbury came alongside, but the Bay State needed no assistance. She lifted with the tide and was floated. She is not leaking badly.

Provision Dealers Reaping a Harvest

NEW YORK, Aug. 7. — Dealers in meat are reaping a harvest as a result o fthe war. Today the fish mongers took their inning, boosting prices from two to three cents a pound for standard varieties. Even sugar and coffee, which come from the West Indies or South American ports, are rising. Eggs also are a source of increased profit to the shopkeepers. The so-called cheap beef sold today at 15 cents as against 13 cents two days ago. Lamb has advanced 4 cents a pound and veal the same. Mutton has gone up 5 cents. Canned meats today advanced 5 cents a dozen wholesale on two-pound tins. And the end is not yet.

$600,000,000 Cotton May Be Thrown Back

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Six hundred million dollars worth of American cotton may be thrown back on the United States as a result of the European war. Department of agriculture officials are today working on a plan to prevent the closing of European markets from resulting in heavy losses to the cotton producers and dealers.

TURKEY MENACES BALKANS

By C. F. BERTELLI.
Staff correspondent of the American who gives the French viewpoint.

PARIS, Aug. 6 (Delayed)—A thousand miles of bayonets and big guns today stretch from Ryaden in Holland to Basle in Switzerland.

Belgium, a peaceful, neutral State, is the first country to bear the brunt of the German attack and every indication points to a big battle being fought near Liege.

This gallant little nation has already won the first honors of war by cutting up the regiments of Uhlans at Spa near Liege.

FEAR ITALY'S MOVES.

High placed personages today were of the opinion that Italy's neutrality will not stand the test of events, and that a series of victories on the part of the Triple Entente would cause the Italian people to rise and compel their government to join hands with France, Russia and England.

In this case the first move would be to take possession of the Italian provinces annexed by Austria on the Adriatic.

At the same time, from the Balkans comes today an unconfirmed report of Turkey's mobilization. Should this prove true, Greece and Roumania would immediately jump into the fray, and the whole of the Balkans would again add to the frightful clash of arms.

Such a move on the part of Turkey would mean base ingratitude to France, who, at the time the latest Turkish loan was floated in Paris, received from the Ottoman government formal assurance of its peaceful intentions.

Indignation was caused in France today by a brief official telegram telling of the cold blooded shooting by the Germans of a French village priest. The same feeling, but even more intense, was caused by this news among Irish Catholics. In fact, the advance of the German army is everywhere characterized by monstrous outrages. Not only are Austrians being massacred under the slightest suspicion of being favorable to France, but in Belgium even peasants who protest against the German invasion on their neutral territory are being summarily executed.

DEFENCE AT LIEGE.

Meanwhile France has reported her fifth day of mobilization and the systematic manner with which the difficult detail work of calling the troops to the colors is being carried out evokes the admiration of all observers. The total absence of all confusion and the remarkable efficiency of each department augur well for France's success in the field.

The magnificent stand made by the Belgians helps the French enormously.

It is apparent that the German general staff's plan, which Prince Lichudsky feared to disclose to Sir Edward Grey, was actually to rush several army corps across Belgium before that country could rise to defend her neutrality.

The Liege forts, however, are giving so fine an account of themselves that the German regiments are now suffering their first check.

400 U. S. Tourists On Way to England

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 7.—A party of 400 American tourists, including Alva A. Adee, Second Assistant Secretary of State and a delegate to the Spitzbergen conference at Christiana, and George Post Wheeler, secretary of the American embassy at Tokio with Mrs. Wheeler, is today proceeding to England from Esbjerg. Henry White, former American ambassador to France, is reported safe in Berlin, but unable to leave.

BRITISH SOCIETY WOMEN BECOME WAR NURSES IN REPLY TO QUEEN'S APPEAL

RELIEF FUND STARTED BY PRINCE OF WALES

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Lord Kitchener, Minister of War, to-day issued a royal decree calling 100,000 more men to military service. They will be the first of those enlisted under the measure adopted by Parliament providing that the army shall be increased by 500,000 men.

The admiralty also issued a royal decree calling 67,000 men for enlistment in the navy. This will raise England's fighting force on the sea to 218,000 men.

The government now has available for use in the emergency that has arisen $1,000,000,000. This was voted by Parliament in two installments at the request of Premier Asquith. It will be drawn upon first for the expenses of increasing the army and navy and next for converting the fleet liners of the British lines into auxiliary cruisers.

HELP WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

While the entire nation was anxiously waiting details of the fighting in the North Sea it extended a helping hand to those who will be widowed and orphaned by the conflict.

In more than a score of cities offices were opened where contributions might be made to a national relief fund. There was a quick response to appeals made by the Prince of Wales, who inaugurated the national relief fund. By noon more than $200,000 had been contributed in London alone.

There was also prompt response to an appeal by Queen Mary asking that the women of the country give their services in assisting the nation. Many society women have already offered their services as nurses.

RUSSIANS ADVANCING.

On Germany's eastern frontier Russian armies are mobilizing more rapidly than at first was expected. Twenty days from last Sunday were allowed before the aggressive advance can begin, but the Russian railways are working well and the main lines are said to be giving forty trains a day.

"If this rate can be kept up the Russian army which we assume to be concentrating behind Vistula will be able to advance. We do not know the Russian plan of campaign, but as Berlin is the centre of gravity it is likely that the main Russian attack will be directed upon it, and that the campaign against Austria will be defensive in principle."

Cutting Cables Shuts Out German Version of Battles

The AMERICAN wishes to point out that the cutting of the German cable has cut off Germany from direct communication with the outside world. Practically all of the news from Europe in the past few days has come either via London, Paris or Brussels, where the foes of Germany exercise strict censorship of all cable news. It is within the power of the censors to suppress any and all news.

The fact that the London cables since the German cables were cut tell almost solely of English, French and Belgian victories must not be taken to indicate beyond doubt that the Germans have not been victorious in some of their battles.

There are always two sides to a story. When the Germans' side is finally told it may show that they have captured many English merchant ships, have inflicted damage to their foes in naval battles, and it may contradict some of the London cables about the German losses at Liege.

War Forces Idleness on 50,000 in New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Fifty thousand men are idle in this city today as the direct result of the war in Europe, and labor union officials declare that at least 250,000 more have been thrown out of work in the United States from the same cause. Overseas commerce is at a standstill. Twelve thousand sailors, firemen, cooks and stewards from freight and passenger vessels are waiting here without employment. Fifteen thousand longshoremen have no wages because no freight is being handled on the docks.

Call on Women to Stop War.

The Woman's Journal and Suffrage News of Boston publishes the following:

NOT CONSULTED.

War has been declared by the big European nations this week without consulting the women.

Are not women's interests at stake?

Are not the lives not only of their loved ones, but of themselves at stake?

Why are they not consulted?

Wake up, women of the United States, and secure your enfranchisement before you, too, find yourselves in the abyss.

ITALY AIDS ENTENTE; ORDERS GERMANS AWAY

BRIXTON T. ALLAIRE.

ROME, Aug. 7.—Italy today threw its support to the Triple Entente—England, Russia and France—and ordered the two German cruisers, the Goeben and Breslau, in the Messina Harbor, to leave immediately or to disarm.

The Goeben was the first to leave and was followed half an hour later by the Breslau. Both war ships steamed in a southerly direction. As the vessels left the harbor the crews dressed ship and cheered continuously, while the bands played the German national anthem.

The Goeben and Breslau, after raiding the Algerian coast and firing on the French towns of Bona and Philippeville, put in to the Italian harbor feeling that under the provisions of the Triple Alliance Italy would be one of Germany's allies.

Grand Duke D'Avarna, Italian ambassador to Austria, arrived today from Vienna with an autograph letter from the King of Austria calling upon Italy to come to the assistance of Austria and Germany, but the Italian government in answer, reiterated its policy of strict neutrality, declaring that any attempt on the part of Germany and Austria to draw Italy into the war would be fruitless.

The Italian government issued the following statement:

"Italy's policy of neutrality is not merely one of self interest, but it is strictly in accord with both the letter and spirit of her obligations under the provisions of the Triple Alliance.

"However unpopular such an action would have been, Italy would have joined Austria and Germany if there was justification for it. It would have undertaken war rather than go back on its plighted word.

"The rupture in Europe that has taken place was not in Italy's power to avoid."

OPERA STARS IN DIRE STRAITS AT OSTEND

OSTEND, Belgium, Aug. 7.—For days past Ostend, as practically the only open port from the continent to England, has witnessed remarkable scenes. Thousands of refugees of all nationalities crowded her, fleeing to various points of safety. Among them are a good sprinkling of Americans, who are trying to make England. Few have ready money. Because letters of credit are unchangeable, the hotels, tradesmen and merchants some days ago refused to do business except for cash.

Among the stranded tourists is Godowski, the famous pianist, who has nine pupils with him, several of whom are Americans.

"I am practically starving," he told the AMERICAN'S correspondent and cannot get even milk or bread."

Yesterday Mr. Godowski wired Ysaye, who is in Brussels, asking for financial assistance and received word from the violinist that he also is destitute.

Another in the same position is Arthur Nikisch, the Boston Symphony orchestra leader, who has his family with him.

Heinrich Hensel, tenor of the Chicago Opera Company in company with M. H. Hanson, the New York impressario, attempted to make a dash for Brussels yesterday. They decorated an automobile with American flags but found the road some miles outside blocked with tree trunks placed every few yards as far as the eye could see.

RELIEF FOR TOURISTS MAROONED IN LONDON

By LAWRENCE ELSTON,
Chief Correspondent of the American.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Immediate needs of all the Americans who were stranded here have been taken care of by the American relief committee, and the cheerfulness of the marooned tourists was added to today when they were told that the United States cruiser Tennessee, carrying millions in gold specie for their relief, had sailed from New York last night.

About 2,500 Americans arrived in London from Paris during the past seventy-four hours, bringing the total that has come here from the French capital since the war began up to 7,500. All the arrivals are being taken care of immediately by the committee.

It is expected that at least 15,000 Americans will sail for the United States within the next week, and there will be a general exodus as soon as the Tennessee arrives and provides the Americans with sufficient gold to pay their passage back to New York. The American liner Philadelphia, which sailed from Southampton for New York with 2,000 Americans will be followed by the Celtic, which was due to sail early today with 2,500 passengers.

Five other ships scheduled to sail from here for New York tomorrow and the total bookings are over 10,000. Every available inch of room on these liners has been sold. Many of those who secured accommodations early and who have no fears of a prolonged stay in London, sold their accommodations to those who wanted to get back to New York at once. They realized two and three times the regular price for their tickets.

CONVERT CUNARD LINER MAURETANIA INTO ARMED CRUISER

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 7.—Work is converting the Cunard liner Mauretania into a British armed cruiser began today. It is expected that the equipping of the giant liner with guns and ammunition will take only a few days. The Mauretania then will proceed to England.

The twenty-five German and Austrian passengers aboard the Mauretania when she docked here who could not satisfy the Canadian government that they were American citizens are being detained as prisoners of war.

IVY POISON ON HANDS, FACE, LEGS

In Pimples. Started to Spread. Burned, Itched and Irritated. Could Not Sleep Many Nights. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Trouble Disappeared.

20 Ridgewood St., Waterbury, Conn.—"I got poison ivy on my hands, face and legs and it started to spread. It broke out in pimples very small and looked as if small white seeds were spilled all over my legs and face. It burned and itched so that I scratched and irritated it. My clothing made it worse and I could not sleep many nights. For two months I tried other remedies and they didn't help me. Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they afforded relief as soon as I bathed with the Cuticura Soap and put the Cuticura Ointment on. In a week the trouble had completely disappeared." (Signed) Edward F. Mead, Jan. 31, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment. Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water, and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each with 32-p. Skin Book will be sent free upon request. Address: "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

RACE OF GERMAN GUNNERS AND BRITISH TO DECIDE BATTLE, SAYS MAHAN

EXPERT WRITES ABOUT FOREIGN WAR DECREES

By EUGENE P. CARVER.

Vice-President of the International Law Association, authority on international, admiralty and marine law, manager of the American Record, correspondent of the Lloyds, director in insurance companies and member of the law firm of Carver, Wardner, Cavanaugh & Walker of Boston and New York.

This and other articles that will follow are written especially for the Boston AMERICAN.

From a historical point of view alone the subject of foreign decrees and embargoes should appeal to every American. It was during our war with England for independence in which the subjects that we are to treat were first declared, and it was during the Napoleonic wars that they so oppressed American commerce as to result in the second war with England, the centennial anniversary of its battles both by land and sea are coming day by day.

Nantucket was taken August 3, our capital at Washington, August 21, and September 1, Castine and Penobscot Bay were occupied by a British fleet. A few days afterwards Baltimore was bombarded, during which engagement was written "The Star Spangled Banner," which is now our National Naval Anthem.

In 1780, during the war between Great Britain and our country, in which after the treaty of 1778, France and Spain had joined with us, Russia sent a circular letter to England, France and Spain, in which she proclaimed five principles, viz.:

1.—That neutral vessels should be allowed to navigate from port to port of belligerents and along their coasts.

2.—That enemy's goods on neutral vessels, with the exception of contraband, should not be seized by belligerents.

3.—That with regard to contraband the treaty (1766) between Russia and Great Britain should be applied in all cases.

4.—That a port should only be considered blockaded if the blockading power had stationed vessels there, so as to create an obvious danger for neutral vessels entering the port.

5.—That these principles should be applied in the proceedings and judgments on the legality of prizes.

In the same year Russia made a treaty with Denmark (to which country Norway then belonged) and with Sweden, and thus the "First Armed Neutrality" came into being.

France, Spain and the United States accepted the principles. The Netherlands, Prussia and Austria joined in 1781, Portugal in 1783 and the Two Sicilies (Italy) in 1783.

VIOLATED PRINCIPLES.

Thus all the powers now at war, with the exception of Great Britain, assented to these principles. These declarations were first violated by Great Britain and Russia (the power which made the declaration) in 1792, the French Revolution being then at its height, in order to interdict all neutral navigation into France, hoping to subdue France by famine.

These two great powers justified their position by claiming that France had proved to be the enemy of the security of all other nations. This, which was intended as a reprisal, was replied to by the French Convention ordering the French fleet to capture all neutral ships carrying provisions to the enemy's ports or carrying the enemy's goods to whatever port.

In 1800 Russia called a Second Armed Neutrality, because of the refusal of England to concede immunity from visit and search to neutral merchantmen under convoy.

This Great Britain refused to recognize, but Sweden, Denmark and Prussia concluded treaties with Russia in support of the same, and it became a fact.

This was what called for the naval battle of Copenhagen, one of Lord Nelson's great victories, and resulting in the defeat and capture of the Danish fleet.

Again, it was set up by Russia in 1807, when war broke out between that country and Great Britain. At this time Russia asserted that she should never again drop the principles that she asserted in 1780.

But again, in the Ukase of August 1, 1809, she violated, as far as England was concerned, one of its most important principles.

I have given these decrees somewhat in detail as showing that when nations are at war they are liable to go back on the very principles they have in time of peace so strenuously advocated.

It may be that this war will be the occasion of a Third Armed Neutrality, called at the request of the United States, in which these same principles, with others of equal fairness, will be made a part of the Law of Nations.

DECREES OF REPRISAL.

These were in the first part of the nineteenth century very common. In November, 1806, Napoleon made his famous Berlin Decree, and the same was adopted by the allies of France in 1807. By this decree neutral vessels were ordered stopped if carrying English goods, the English goods to be seized and the vessels to be seized if over half were English goods.

Great Britain answered with the famous orders in Council of November 11, 1807, which caused Napoleon to issue his Milan Decree on December 15 of the same year.

It was the United States, a neutral nation, that suffered most by these decrees, as she was by far the largest ship-owning nation outside of those engaged in war.

Our President should be careful that we are not placed again in such an unfortunate position by a timely declaration of principles that will protect both our ships and our goods.

The United States, in the case of the Alabama claims, has as late as 1870 taken such a position and maintained it. Even when it came near bringing about a war with Great Britain, and finally, on May 8, 1871, by the Treaty of Washington, obtained a great victory, which resulted in the Geneva arbitration—the first great victory of peace, and which is one of the great authorities on the doctrine of peaceful settlement of differences between nations.

The Treaty of Washington contained what is known in international law as "The Three Rules of Washington," and were to be binding upon the arbitrators.

These rules relate to the fitting out of vessels which might be engaged in naval warfare.

The treaty contains the stipulation that the parties "agree to observe these rules as between themselves in the future, and to bring them to the knowledge of other maritime powers, and to invite them to accede to them."

It was to distribute this award of $15,500,000 that Congress established the first courts that passed on many of these questions and where the writer first had his actual experience.

At the moment of writing the great grief of our President has been announced and the whole nation mourns with him.

AWAIT GREAT TREATY.

Let us hope that in the hour of his trouble with the great duties which devolve upon him by reason of the great war that our leading statesmen from all the great political parties will forget those differences and agree upon a firm and consistent foreign policy, assist in drafting and adopting resolutions and proclamations by which the interests of all neutral nations may be respected, the progress of civilization advanced and the suffering of innocent and defenceless persons averted.

Let us trust that among another great treaty may be signed by which all of the world may be at peace and by which many of these disputed subjects may be settled and that this treaty may bear the name of the city named for the man who refused a crown and whom we speak of as "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Prince of Wales to Fight With Grenadier Guards

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The fortunes of war may cause grief to the royal family as well as to their humbler subjects. The Prince of Wales today received his commission as an officer in the Grenadier Guards. His regiment will be among the first called for active service. He is only twenty years old.

High Treason to Aid Kaiser, British Ediot

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Two royal proclamations have just been issued. One revokes the prohibition against the importation of arms to Ireland. The other declares that British subjects contributing to a big loan being raised on behalf of the Kaiser or contracting with the German government will be judged guilty of high treason, the penalty of which is death.

CAN BELGIANS FIGHT TILL ALLIES ARRIVE?

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—"If the Germans can hold out until they can bring forward their siege guns, a decisive battle, undoubtedly, will be fought in Belgium," declared Rear Admiral Alfred T. Mahan at his home in Quogue, L. I.

"I am not versed in land manoeuvres. You must interview some General on that. But I wish to ask—where are the English? I shouldn't think that England need fear molestation from the German warships. Her fleet is large. Convoys for her transports, I should think, could be spared. But, after all, her fleet may be wholly occupied in looking for the Germans.

"If England hurries her army to Belgium the tide of war may turn against the Germans. Today it seems to me to be a race between the siege guns of Germany and the reinforcing army of England. Can the Belgian army, aided perhaps by whatever corps France can spare, hold its own until the English arrival? That, I think, is a momentous question.

"I rather looked for the Kaiser's ultimatum to Italy. Italy can hardly be expected to remain out of the conflict. She must be for or against Germany and Austria. By remaining out of the fight she aids the enemies of her former allies. We will now see whether that alliance is binding.

"Regarding sea engagements on this side of the Atlantic, the chances of Germany are hopeless.

"Reports have reached me that people nearby me here in Quogue have heard heavy firing. This may have been the big guns of the warships or it may have been target practise at Forts Terry and Wright.

"If the wind was from the northeast the guns of the forts could have been heard easily. Some time, however, if these crashes were not from the guns of the American warships, we shall hear positively that the hostile cruisers have met. Then we shall see how one or two ships can stand against three times their number.

"If there is truth in the rumor that the English cruisers conveying the Lusitania have sunk the German vessels, this is the answer."

How to Lose Your Tan Freckles or Wrinkles

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or, more perplexing still, a supposed crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and apply a little at night as you would cold cream, washing it off next morning. In a few days you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, no and to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxo-lite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. This is not only a reliable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.—ADVERTISEMENT.

JACK JOHNSON MAY JOIN THE FRENCH ARMY

By JACK CONWAY.

WITH almost all of Europe involved in the greatest war in history, the ineradicable members of the Boxers Union, who went to the Old World to gather in some easy money fighting second and third raters, are now sitting up nights trying to formulate plans which will enable them to escape from the countries which are being devastated by the dogs of war.

The noble American ring gladiators, who are on the other side of the big mudpuncin, wouldn't forfeit a chance at a championship to be back in Uncle Sam's land. When they return to their pasts, they will probably tell us that the reason why they were so eager to get home was because they wished to give General Stallings' gang of hustling Braves the once over or perhaps partake over a plate of Boston baked beans with a side order of brown bread.

But, as I have often stated in this column, this is a free country and every man has a right to his opinion. We would not be cruel enough to accuse any of our gallant fighters of dodging a regular big league tussle, but then,—well, what's the use of going into details anyway?

JACK JOHNSON probably is not counting himself a great deal just now for he will be unable to return to the United States like most of the other boxers who are in Europe. A term in prison awaits "Lil Artha" in this country and besides he is a citizen of France and would not be permitted to quit that country just now. He is above the age limit when men are obliged to go into the French army in time of peace, but when France is engaged in war with another nation every able-bodied Frenchman can be pressed into service. Johnson could not say he was not an able-bodied man and consequently may hear the "zip" of a German bullet before the great Continental war is terminated.

The sad part of the entire affair is that there won't be any gate receipts in the big fight across the seas. No kind-hearted promoter will issue a fat purse for Jack Johnson to win, lose or draw. Is it any wonder that the big negro is worrying?

"GUNBOAT" SMITH, who was champion of the "white hopes" until he lost to Georges Carpentier, is also in Europe. Smith is a fighting sailor who has seen active service in Uncle Sam's navy, but just now the gunner is trying to get back to little old New York. Perhaps he has a homesick and the gay lights of Broadway may revive his sinking spirits. Young Ahearn, Freddy Welsh, Frank Moran, Fred Yello, Noah Brusso and a score of other boxers scattered around other European countries are trying to get passage for these shores.

The unlucky fighting in Europe but as we said before the boys that are landing the big purses are not cutting in on any of the gate receipts. That's why the dear old fighters refuse to fight. Even Georges Ihair put it, the only place it is peaceful today is in a ring where a couple of big hushies are scheduled to battle.

GEORGES CARPENTIER, by the way, has entered the French army. All of which has caused the wise men to list that France will win on a foul.

PLENTY of action is expected at the big-car show which the Atlas A. A. has arranged for this evening. Four ten-round bouts have been arranged by Matchmaker Johnny Morgan which will furnish the "bang" with forty rounds of fighting, provided each bustle goes the limit.

The white hopes, Jimmy Maples of Charlestown and Jimmy Boyle, who hails from Dublin, has created considerable interest. These two boys met at the University Club in Cambridge a week ago and Maples was awarded the decision. Boyle, however, gave a grand account of himself and a large crowd, which gathered around the ringside were of the opinion that he was entitled to the decision.

FISTIC lovers from Beachmont and Revere will receive an opportunity to see two of their favorites in action on both programs when Walter Butler have been signed for bouts. Mack will clash with Charley Beyers of the South End, while Butler will exchange punches with Jack Donnelly, who hails from Providence or "Little New York" as the honorable natives delight in calling the capital of Rhode Island. Should Butler have both been coming to the front with rapid strides, but they will have to travel at a merry clip if they are to win their contests Tuesday evening.

The other bout will bring together Al Delmont, the veteran North End boxer and "Tiger" Young of New York. Delmont now weighs close to 128 pounds and consequently the whirl will be in the lightweight class.

BASEBALL NOW BELLIGERENT

What Happened When the Simple Censor Spied a Score.

By NICK FLATLEY

An English censor has forbidden the cabling of the box scores of baseball games, claiming he fears they may contain code messages.—News Item.

Great consternation reigned in the English Foreign Office when the following message came trickling in over the American cable:

"Pirates beat the White Sox today. The scores:

	R.	H.	E.
Pirates ..... 3 21 20 20 8 5 8 15 15—5	4	23
White Sox..... 13 20 15 16 7 5 14 0 8—4	12	3

"My word!" exclaimed the censor, a self loving subaltern elevated from a course of five-o'clock teas and cricket matches to the dignity of a stuffed hair and the sayso of what the world hears of English battles, "My word, I say, this bally note is a code message, doncherknow. Blimme if we don't stop it."

SCORE MAKES HIM SUSPICIOUS.

"Some murder," exclaimed the American student, who happened in to beg the price of his fare back home.

"That's a helluva score," he went on. "But stogy-reek operators make more mistakes than Hank O'Day ever did when he was an umpire."

"But I say," interpolated the Censor, "it has me twisted up rough. Dashed if I know what the deuced thing means. It's a code. I'll be dashed if it isn't, I say."

"Take it from me, young feller," advised the American, "either the Feds have shot the leagues to pieces or the baseball writers are on a strike. That dope sounds like a society dame's baseball yarn. Let's give it the once over."

He did. Naturally he looked at the score by innings first. That part seemed more queer than the rest.

WORKS OUT CODE.

Now the young man was from Princeton, so he had naturally read Poe. The leading man in the Good Rag started out to unravel a tangled skein by the simplest of all solutions, assigning the numbers in the scratch to the corresponding letters in the alphabet.

When the impromptu detective had this happy idea he got busy and after a little effort, though he remembered the correct situations of each, he very letter in the alphabet.

When he took the score, and by determined concentration had reduced the figures thereof to letters, he had the following line:

"Out the second."

And the second line brought him this:

"Stop Gen. Hell."

"Huh," mused the expert, "some R. E. say has a happy one under his belt, all right, all right."

Then he turned his attention to the box with the players' records. The first line he encountered was:

AB H TB PO A E

Bodie, cf 3 0 1 4 5 2 5

It was very simple for the American, who, though no expert to translate this. For instance:

Ping Bodie is a Yola. The Poles are Turks, consequently the first word to begin with the word "Russians." The middle word "shot full," was a stretch of the imagination. Stretching a perverse imagination a bit further he shot "Russians shot holes."

REVEALS RUSSIAN RETREAT.

A. B. could mean nothing else, of course, than "Allies begin." It was obvious that the figure "6" had something to do with the time because, in a properly constructed sentence, the line ought to come at that point. Obviously, since the Russians were ABOUT to begin something the "6" could mean nothing else than the sixth day of the month or the sixth day of the week, both of which would fit. The sixth of the month was yesterday and the sixth day of the week was today, so there is doubtful which day was meant. However, it was set down as "Thursday or Friday."

"E" could mean nothing else than retreat or rout. Since it was obvious that nobody could predict a rout, "retreat" was the word. He now had a sentence:

"Russians, shot full of holes, are about to begin on Thursday or Friday a retreat."

CENSOR BANS BOX SCORES.

In the next column appears "TB". Which can mean nothing else than "taking Berlin" and, under it, the figure 5, reading "four."

Now, in the next column he found "PO 5," meaning "five Polish (Russian) officers." And in the following column, "A 2," which could mean nothing else than "attached to." In the final column, the "E" could stand for nothing else than the Emperor—i. e., the Czar.

The "2" under "E" puzzled the expert for a time but finally, considering that five errors would blow almost any game, he translated it into more elegant English, to read, "made an awful mess of the job."

Therefore, the section of the box score finally read:

"Russians shot full of holes, are about to begin, on Thursday or Friday, a retreat. Nothing doing. Have abandoned taking Berlin, for five Russian officers attached to the Czar, made an awful mess of the job."

Now, don't you see what a wonderful aid military intelligence was concealed in the simple box score, the which apparently recorded the deeds and the misdeeds of Ping Bodie, of the Chicago White Sox.

However, did the blue-penciled the box scores of the ball games.

Record for Bingen Horse.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Roberta Bingen made a record at the Bergen County Fair meeting, at Hohokus, N. J., in trotting two heats in 2:14¼ and 2:15¼, the fastest time made this year by a three-year-old trotter over a half-mile course.

BRITONS ON SHORT END IN TENNIS PLAY

By FRED HOEY.

Australia is picked to win the doubles match with the British Isles team at Longwood this afternoon and thereby qualify to challenge the American Davis Cup team.

The double win of the Australians through the plucky and hard play in the sensational matches of the singles yesterday has given them the call on the English team.

England will have a fresh player in use in the doubles this afternoon in the person of Lieutenant Kingscote, who will team up with J. C. Parke. Norman Brookes and A. F. Wilding will be their opponents. The match will be called at 2:30.

A win for Wilding and Brookes today puts England out of the running altogether. The two singles matches scheduled for tomorrow afternoon between Brookes and Lowe and Wilding and Parke will be played.

The defeat of Parke by Brooke, when the former was once within one point of winning was certainly unfortunate, for the Briton, but Brookes earned the set by his plucky efforts.

The highly sensational work of the four men yesterday will probably attract a record breaking crowd to the courts this afternoon. The Englishmen have two points against them, but if they display the game fight offered by their singles men yesterday the Australians will know that they have been through a tough match.

Blind Colt Etawah Again Breaks Record

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 7.—Etawah, which, two weeks ago at Cleveland broke the four-year-old colt record, held by Direction for 21 years, clipped another quarter of a second from the mark at the Grand Circuit meet here when, driven by Geers in an exhibition mile, he covered the distance in 2:03¾.

King Couchman easily won the $3,000 Comstock Stake for 2:11 pacers in straight heats.

Omar won the 2:08 pace, while the handicap sweepstakes was won by Grace.

Ten-Year Contract for Coach Courtney

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Charles E. Courtney, coach of the Cornell crews for the last thirty years, whose contract still has two years to run, is about to sign a contract for ten more years, at a greatly increased salary rate, according to reports here.

Courtney last year declined that in 1916, when his present contract ran out, he would retire as coach and would be connected with Cornell rowing only in an advisory capacity.

OVER THE PLATE

By NICK FLATLEY

JUST before the game yesterday three of the Brave players were so sick that Manager Stallings at one time doubted whether or not he would be able to use them. After the game, it is said that several Pirates were sick, including Fred Clarke. Marquard, Schmidt and Deal were the indisposed trio, though their playing didn't show it.

* * *

A BIG crowd was out to see the ninth straight victory and, according to recent custom, the clambering Braves provided more thrills than go with a ten-reel movie at a five-cent show. When the Rabbit busted one in the tenth and dropped it into the railroad tracks he was given one of the finest receptions ever tendered a player in this town. The crowd rushed onto the field, formed a lane along the base paths and bowled like mad as the midget ambled around the course.

* * *

A win for Wilding and Brookes today puts England out of the running altogether. The two singles matches scheduled for tomorrow afternoon between Brookes and Lowe and Wilding and Parke will be played.

The defeat of Parke by Brooke, when the former was once within one point of winning was certainly unfortunate, for the Briton, but Brookes earned the set by his plucky efforts.

* * *

DOUBLE plays came thick and fast, the winners pulling off three dual killings, while the Pirates did the stunt once. The Braves tossed away two other chances to wind up matters quickly, and both were followed by runs. In the third, when the Pirates counted three times, a drive by Maranville stopped a double that would have retired the hostiles scoreless, while again in the fifth the little shortstop made a wide throw in his hurry to get the ball to first, and lost a man. The slip let another counter in. Had the two attempts been executed perfectly, Tyler would very likely have registered another shutout.

* * *

MANAGER STALLINGS had no wish yesterday to work Tyler, but "Lefty George" insisted on being put in and the boss let him have his way. This shows just how things are going in the ranks. A year or so ago and the star southpaw would never have dreamed of starting twice in four days. In fact, once a week was about as often as he liked to hurl. But now times have indeed changed.

* * *

ALL the good things Owner Ashley Gaffney, Manager Stallings, Captain Evers and the rest of the squad had to say about Paul Strand were verified by the way that athletic left-handed gentleman performed while he was in the fray. He had a bop to his fast one that had the Pirates diving away, while his slow ball was a regular Matty fadeaway, with a few extra frills. Best of all he showed a heretofore undreamed of ability to stick 'em over.

* * *

PERHAPS our old friend, Mugsy McGraw, couldn't use Indian Jim Bluejacket, the youthful aborigine, who recently joined the "Joints" for a more paying job with the Brooklyn Feds. Yesterday the noble (not, by the way, the adjective Mc-Graw uses for him) child of the forest hurled his first game. He blanked Kansas City and incidentally beat the most-injunctioned pitcher in baseball, Chief Johnson, 2 to 0.

* * *

IT sure takes a two or three run lead to bring out the fighting qualities of the Braves. They've had so much good pitching lately, that one run or two counted and they're willing to lose along without much worrying. But when the enemy gets the jump, there's a mighty noticeable change. The crabbing starts with great vim, and the rush to get out in front generally shakes the opposition all to bits. Incidentally, it's fine for the spectators.

* * *

OUT in Detroit this afternoon, the Red Sox start the final series of their present Western hike. The jaunt has not been any too successful, a three-day stomp in St. Louis killing what otherwise promised to be a record almost as good as the Braves chalked up out that way. All told, the Carrigans are a bit further back from the fore than they were when they left Fenway Park.

Bad Accident Mars Final Day of Racing at Hillsgrove Park

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 7.—Dave Warman of this city piloted two winners in the final day of the Bay State Short Ship races at Hillsgrove, driving Mainstep to victory in the 2:30 United Coal Company Stake and Emsgraid in the 2:26 trot.

An accident marred the races. Charles Davis, sixty-one years of age, of Shirley, a caretaker in the stable of A. E. Roberts, was seriously hurt by a runaway horse which crashed into him. He was taken to the Rhode Island Hospital and it is said that he may have internal injuries which may prove fatal.

Gladstone Cup Won by Point Judith

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 7.—The final polo contest for the Gladstone cups was won by Point Judith, which defeated Bryn Mawr, 7¾ to 7.

It was a close contest throughout, and the final period was exceptionally fast and exciting. Two of Bryn Mawr's goals were by handicap.

Lawrence Favorite in Hour Race Behind Motor at Beach Oval

Lawrence is riding in fine form at present as evidenced Wednesday night when he broke the world's record for thirty-five miles at Brighton Beach, covering the stretch in 41 minutes and 27 seconds.

Wiley has won his last two starts at Revere and expects to continue his good work tomorrow night. Walthour is one of the best over the middle distance route and his opponents will have to cut out a hot pace to beat him.

The same may be said of Carman, who now comes up as a strong contender for the paced championship after his great win in the Brooklyn sweepstakes race of 50 miles.

As usual a big card of professional and amateur events will precede the motor-paced race.

ON THE BEACH,

a pebble's toss from the surf, are well-managed hotels and boarding places. They invite patronists in Sunday American Resort Ads.

BRAVES BATTLING HARD TO TURN THEIR POSITION IN NATIONAL STANDING

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

RED SOX OPEN FOUR GAME SERIES AGAINST THE TIGERS IN LAST OF WESTERN GAMES

3D PLACE IN REACH OF BRAVES

By NICK FLATLEY.

Might as a good idea to make it four straight from the Pirates today, stay within at least six and a half games of the front, and get in trim for the Reds, who register at Fenway Park tomorrow.

Whether or not it's a good idea, the Braves are going to try it. Unless a shipment of pepper comes in this meantime from out around Pittsburgh, they're sure to come through, too.

Today the Braves are nearer the front than ever they have been. They've won nine games in a row. Likewise, they've put twenty-three of their last twenty-eight in the locker, which establishes a new record for the present season.

The militant Mackmen, with twelve in a row, and all thrown in, could only nick of twenty-two in the same number of battles. So when the two meet in the world's series, it looks as if—

STRAND MAY WORK TODAY.

It's very likely that Paul Strand will southpaw for us today. Paul is some southpaw. All season, we have been hearing the same. Yesterday, the Spalding scenor showed us. Along the Pirates. He worked three frames, but didn't even get a good sweat up, so should be right enough to shoulder a full-day's work.

Judging, however, that winning two games in as many days with a rookie might take the heart out of the Giants before that "crosshill" series in Gotham next week, Boss Stallings may use some other flinger. Just who that party may be is something of a puzzle.

Following the regular rotation, which same has been a highly successful process of late, Bill James is due to serve 'em up. But Tyler's slip way cause the director of affairs at Walpole street to switch. That being the case, he has picked Dutch Leonard, who has been ripe for a week or more, and looked good the one session he worked yesterday, and Otto Hess, the portside Kaiserian reservist.

Either of the pair, with a good lump, should push this outfit Pirate craft deeper down into the mud.

For the enemy, George McQuillan, is most likely to be held in pull this least one win out of the slaughter.

EVERS OUT OF IT.

Pinch Whitted, who won last Saturday's hectic fray, and who made a hero of himself playing second, while the Trojan was on the shelf with a stiff neck, will work out at the middle station this afternoon.

Captain Johnny Evers was called home to Troy this morning by sickness in his family. His two youngsters are slightly under the weather. But he expects to be back soon.

The Braves still have a chance to hop into third place today, provided they win while the Cardinals lose. The westerners are only one game ahead, and the best Braves can do means a slight fractional lead.

Then, too, the Cubs are only a brace off, and with the Giants on their heels again are quite likely to slip a cog.

Even if they don't the leaders come back, always of course allowing for that customary Boston win, so there's not much to worry about, no matter what happens up ahead there.

And, as has been mentioned, it's only the Pirates today. Last change. Everybody take a final shot.

Finals in New York State Tennis Play

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—H. H. Hackett and F. B. Alexander, former national champions, and holders of the New York State Titles, won a place in the final round of the State tournament here.

Charles Chambers and J. T. Allen, a local pair, also won through, both matches being played on the turf of the Crescent Athletic Club.

In the finals, Hackett and Alexander beat N. R. Browne and C. A. Wayne of California, 6—4, 6—2, 7—5, 7—5, 6—4. Chambers and Allen beat R. H. Palmer and Harold Throckmorton, the New Jersey pair, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4.

Smith Wins Golf Title in Record Play

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Playing the best golf of his career, Macdonald Smith of Oakmont won the Metropolitan open championship title with a 72-hole total of 278 on the links of the Scarsdale Golf and Country club.

This total must be credited as a new championship record, the best previous performance being a 279 by Harry Vardon in the German open tournament in 1911.

BASEBALL CHATTER

FORMER ORIOLES HAVE BEEN PLAYing ducking ball for the major league clubs which recently secured them from Baltimore. Two have been a source of strength to the Yankees, Daniels is holding well and hitting hard for the Reds, while Shore is taking his regular turn in the box for the Red Sox with success.

JIMMY BURKE, THE TIGER SCOUT, has been sent to the Western League to cherry pick the circuit to look over some playing material. Nacin has been tipped off that the Sioux Falls Cubs and Wagner out of Duluth.

JIMMY VIOX OF THE PIRATES declares there is no truth in the report that he will go over to the Federal League before the other season rolls around. Vios says he has been treated well at Pittsburgh and will remain there as long as Fred Clarke wants him.

EUGENE McGREEVY, AT ONE TIME AN umpire in the American League, has been signed up by the Northwestern League and he will finish the season there. McGreevy has worked in the Pacific Coast League since leaving the ladders.

WILSON COLLINS, THE FORMER BRAVE and Vanderbilt University star, is decidedly averse to joining the Binghamton Club of the New York State League, to which he was released a few weeks ago. Collins threatens to give up baseball rather than go back to a Class B league.

IT SEEMS QUEER TO HEAR OF AN infielder being weak on a ground ball but recently it was said that is the main weakness with Jack Pfeffer of the Brooklyn Nationals. He is a regular position and he makes brilliant stops on difficult chances, but seems to run set himself for are the puzzlers.

OTIS CLYMER, FOR SEVERAL YEARS A prominent player in the major leagues, has asked for his unconditional release from the Minneapolis Club. Clymer was injured on May 3 and has not been able to play since. He has a thriving business in Minneapolis and desires to give up his entire attention.

PITCHER JACK ROWAN HAS GONE TO his home in Dayton, undecided whether he will join the Pittsburgh Federals or not. Manager Hermann of the Reds has tried to place Rowan elsewhere, but the club officials will make a deal for him, and he will probably go to Chattanooga.

THE ORIOLE VETERANS WHO SURVIVED Jack Dunn's recent auction sale have lost all their pepper, according to critics who have seen the circuit is beginning to affect the young stock. The club is now skidding fast and will not surprise the fans if it strikes the second division before long.

KAVANAUGH, THE YOUNG OUTFIELDER who has been with the White Sox all season, declines to go to the Des Moines Club of the Western League, to which he was sold a few days ago. Kavanaugh was in the Federal League last season, but he is not making any threats about going back, as he doubts if the Feds would take him.

JACK QUINN AND SNIPE CONLEY OF the Baltimore Feds are trying to interest Manager Knabe in a trip to Pennsylvania after the close of the Federal League season, but Knabe is thinking of taking his team to the Federal Leaguers attend a series at the close of the season between the pennant winners and the runners-up for a probable trade for some other seven clubs.

HASTINGS, IN THE NEBRASKA STATE League has a pitcher named Dave Yanush, who pitches shutout games so often that they consider he is having an off day when the other club scores on him. He has a record of eighteen victories in twenty-two starts.

RED SOX OPEN 4-GAME SERIES WITH DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 7.—Rounding out the last leg of their great western circuit, the Red Sox open a four-game series against the Tigers here today.

Jennings has his men all primed to give the Hostonians a warm reception and with Ty Cobb back in the lineup Carrigan and his band will have to play their best brand of ball to get away with anything.

The Sox had a fine rest yesterday and after their "come back" in the final game against the Browns, Manager Carrigan is confident that they will be able to handle the best the Tigers can put forth and a little more if hard pressed.

Vean Gregg and Collins are both due to work in the box, while Foster and Wood are also in fine shape.

For Detroit will be Covaleskie, unless Jean Dubuc should convince Jennings that he has suddenly recovered form.

Cobb, who has been out of the east for ten days, was well enough yesterday to participate in an exhibition game the Tigers played in Saginaw, of the South Michigan League, and is anxious to get going again.

Cornell Stadium to Be Ready in Fall of 1915

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Cornell's athletic field, the goal of the Alumni Field Committee for the last ten years, will be completed so that football may be played there in 1915. This assurance was given when a contract for the erection of a stadium to seat 5,000 persons and also an inclosure for the field was awarded and work began at once.

Shamrock and Erin May Fall Into Hands of German Cruisers

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—No word has been received at the New York Yacht Club from Sir Thomas Lipton regarding the calling off of the America Cup races next month. Interrupted cable communication was supposed to be the reason no reply had been received from the message to Sir Thomas asking him what he desired to do.

The capture or at least the pursuit of the Shamrock and Sir Thomas' steam yacht Erin, which is convoying the racing yacht, would not be surprising. The Erin would be a good prize for a German cruiser.

Warren and Helen Go to a Dance and Warren Denounces the Club as a Bunch of Snobs.

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

HELEN sat alone in a corner of the ball room of the Country Club at the shore. Much to her displeasure Warren had insisted upon going to one of the regular Friday night informal dances and Helen had given in as she always did to avoid a quarrel. The invitation to attend had come from some one who had known Carrie, and Helen had felt somehow that she would rather not accept hospitality from someone who had no interest at all in her but who had probably extended the invitation from a sense of duty.

Warren came back after a few minutes and sat down by Helen's side.

"Benbrook and his wife haven't come yet," he remarked; "nothing to do till they come, I suppose, then we'll probably be introduced to somebody worth while."

"They probably won't even remember us. Mrs. Raymond told me this morning that lots of invitations were given out for these dances to hotel people simply for appearance's sake."

"There you are again, borrowing trouble. I'll warrant you that Benbrook will see that we are well taken care of. What do you bother with that Mrs. Raymond for, anyway? I told you what kind of a woman she was the first week-end we spent here."

"But Warren, I can't prevent her speaking to me, can I? You know how hard it is to avoid her when we are staying at the same hotel."

SEVERAL WOMEN COME IN.

Two or three women trailed into the room at that moment and looked complacently at the decorations. They stood near Helen and she remembered having seen two of them quite frequently on the beach. One lived in a cottage near the hotel, a beautiful place; the other had a charming bungalow near the clubhouse. Both were dressed simply. Helen wondered if her gown was too elaborate for the occasion, and she turned in her chair to look at the groups on the veranda.

Most of the young people were dressed plainly, but there were elaborate gowns on the older women. People were arriving constantly. Everyone seemed to own a machine, and Helen thought angrily of the bus which she and Warren had been forced to take.

Several young people came into the room to try the floor. They all stared curiously at Helen and Warren.

"Let's go out on the veranda," said Helen, finally. "Only the dancers sit in here and it isn't likely that we shall dance at all."

"I'll take you outside and then I'll try to find Benbrook." And again Helen was left alone in a corner of the crowded piazza porch while Warren sat out on another pilgrimage. Helen looked out toward the water and tried not to feel bored. To her pleasure like this was far worse than no pleasure at all, but if she had refused to come Warren would have been sure to say that she always threw away any chances she might have for a good time by her foolish sensitiveness.

Warren came back presently followed by a tall, gray-haired man. The group next to her turned as the two men came out on the veranda.

"Mr. Benbrook," called one of the young girls, "isn't it a perfect night for dancing? Do come over and talk to us for a few minutes."

He tossed back a laughing retort, but did not stop, and the next moment she was bowing to Helen as Warren introduced them.

"I'm glad to see you out here," he said cordially. "Mrs. Benbrook will look you up a little later, and then you will meet some of our people. How do you like it, Mrs. Curtis? We are proud of our country club. I've been telling your husband here that he ought to join. Anyway, come up and let us see you as often as you can." He rose to go. "I'll send Mrs. Benbrook around to meet you in a little while. We have so many newcomers that it takes some time to meet them all."

"He's a bigger man up here," said Warren as Mr. Benbrook walked back across the ballroom floor and joined a group at the entrance, "and has to meet everyone who comes, and it's no small job, I can tell you."

"I wish Louise and Bob had been able to come with us," said Helen. "Then we could have made our own crowd, and things might have been more pleasant. I hate to feel under obligations to people who are strangers to us."

HELEN SIGHS FOR LOUISE

"Carrie knew the Benbrooks last year. It isn't much of a favor that I can see, to introduce us to a few people up here. You always make things a great deal worse than they really are."

"Carrie had a cottage and belonged to the club. That makes a big difference. We are only outsiders."

"That's right, make things as uncomfortable as you can. I swear, I never saw anybody like you."

Helen was silent. The dancing had begun and she watched the whirling couples a few minutes without speaking. She and Warren had taken a few dancing lessons at the end of the Winter, but even now the steps were entirely different from any they had known. She hoped that Warren would not ask her to dance. She felt vaguely out of place up here among a lot of people she didn't know and who had no interest in her.

"Let's walk around to the other end of the piazza," said Warrren finally.

"Oh, no, dear, I'd rather not. Mr. Benbrook might think we had come around there on purpose."

"Well, suppose he does, that wouldn't kill you, would it? You can let Louise would have a little more backbone than you have about a thing like this!"

"But, Warren, you don't want him to think that you are so anxious to meet people that you have to hunt him up after he promised to have his wife come and meet me?"

"He probably has forgotten all about us in the rush. Do you want to dance?"

"Why, Warren, we don't know any of the steps."

"Well, we can do the ones we do know, can't we?"

At that moment Mr. Benbrook came around the end of the veranda with a tall, rather stately woman. It was the woman with the stunning cottage near the hotel.

BRIDGE IS PROPOSED

"How do you do?" she said languidly as she sank down in a chair beside Helen. "It seems good to be able to sit down for a few moments. My husband tells me that this is your first visit here, Mrs. Curtis. You must give me your name for our bridge next week. Of course, you play bridge, don't you?"

"Yes, I play," returned Helen, not at all anxious to play, however, with a crowd of women she had never met before.

"Then I'll count on you. You see, we must have a certain number of tables and I know you'll have a good time. Have you met my daughter?" as a tall young girl came out on the porch, followed by a good looking young fellow in white flannels.

"Gertrude, this is Mrs. Curtis; she is staying at the Seaview. We must try to make it nice for her while she is here, dear."

The girl acknowledged the introduction coldly. She evidently was accustomed to her mother's chaperonage of any poor neglected mortals who happened to drift into the haven of the clubhouse, thought Helen bitterly.

"Will you come around and see about having the music extended for half an hour, mother?" she queried. "People arrive so late that it doesn't seem as if we had danced any time at all!"

Mrs. Benbrook rose.

"I'm sorry to have to run off this way, Mrs. Curtis, but I know you understand. I shall look for you at the bridge next week, and must run up when you get here and I'll see that you are placed at a table."

"Are you ready to go home now?" said Helen to Warren quietly after they were alone once more. She did not intend to say another thing to Warren about the affair, but she was surprised when he turned to her, his face purple with rage.

"I never saw such a bunch of snobs," he stormed furiously. "Play bridge here, indeed! Well, I guess you won't. You're a game little sport," looking at her admiringly, "and you're the handsomest woman in the room, if you don't be-lieve it, ask the country club. Come on, let's go home."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

AN AFTERNOON WEDDING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young lady, twenty-two years old, who is to be married soon, would ask you to be kind enough to give her the following information.

Is it permissible for the groom to wear a gray business suit at an afternoon wedding (4 o'clock). If not, what is the customary wedding attire? Also, does the hour above permit the bride to wear a veil? K. P. A.

THE customary wearing apparel for the groom for an afternoon wedding is frock coat (Prince Albert), gray striped trousers, silk hat, shoes with gray tops, gray gloves and standing collar with gray ascot. The bride wears the conventional white and bridal veil.

BE LOYAL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of eighteen and in love with a man of twenty-one. We met about nine months ago and have been keeping company since. He has lost his position and he has had no success in getting another. I have received an offer from another young man, but have not made up my mind whether to accept him or refuse. K.

PERHAPS if you are loyal to your friend now that he has met with reverses you will keep him cheerful and confident of the future and ready to battle for it. Go to another man and don't let him feel that you were merely a fair-weather friend.

DON'T HESITATE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Please let me know if it would be proper for me to attend a wedding with my brother's (in law alone, as my sister cannot attend? My parents and sister urge me to go so that they (my sister), as circumstances won't let her go. CONSTANT READER.

CERTAINLY you may go, since both your parents and your sister approve.

What Dancing Will Do for You

Why It Makes You Happy, Healthy and Wise

By MARGUERITE ST. CLAIRE

DANCING is the most wonderful controlling agent in the world.

Why, I have danced since early childhood, and today I know that there is absolutely nothing in the world that the power of dancing cannot control. Its influence is limitless.

In the broad definition of the term, control means holding in check, making for normal conditions everytime. And first of all dancing controls the physical end of life, keeps the body normal by changing all superfluous fat to muscle. Girls who don't dance are all afraid of having too much muscle. Why, I have known some of my most intimate friends to declare that it took away from the softer, more feminine outlines to have any hardening of the muscles in the body of a girl. You see, in cases like this, people do not take into consideration the power of control. They draw conclusions from girls who have exercised beyond the normal amount. But truthfully speaking I don't think it is possible to put any kind of limit to dancing. If a girl feels that she is ingaedly out of place up here among a lot of people she didn't know and who had no interest in her.

"Let's walk around to the other end of the piazza," said Warrren finally.

"Oh, no, dear, I'd rather not. Mr. Benbrook might think we had come around there on purpose."

"Well, suppose he does, that wouldn't kill you, would it? You can let Louise would have a little more backbone than you have about a thing like this!"

"But, Warren, you don't want him to think that you are so anxious to meet people that you have to hunt him up after he promised to have his wife come and meet me?"

"He probably has forgotten all about us in the rush. Do you want to dance?"

"Why, Warren, we don't know any of the steps."

"Well, we can do the ones we do know, can't we?"

At that moment Mr. Benbrook came around the end of the veranda with a tall, rather stately woman. It was the woman with the stunning cottage near the hotel.

BRIDGE IS PROPOSED

"How do you do?" she said languidly as she sank down in a chair beside Helen. "It seems good to be able to sit down for a few moments. My husband tells me that this is your first visit here, Mrs. Curtis. You must give me your name for our bridge next week. Of course, you play bridge, don't you?"

"Yes, I play," returned Helen, not at all anxious to play, however, with a crowd of women she had never met before.

"Then I'll count on you. You see, we must have a certain number of tables and I know you'll have a good time. Have you met my daughter?" as a tall young girl came out on the porch, followed by a good looking young fellow in white flannels.

The girl acknowledged the introduction coldly. She evidently was accustomed to her mother's chaperonage of any poor neglected mortals who happened to drift into the haven of the clubhouse, thought Helen bitterly.

"Will you come around and see about having the music extended for half an hour, mother?" she queried. "People arrive so late that it doesn't seem as if we had danced any time at all!"

Mrs. Benbrook rose.

"I'm sorry to have to run off this way, Mrs. Curtis, but I know you understand. I shall look for you at the bridge next week, and must run up when you get here and I'll see that you are placed at a table."

"Are you ready to go home now?" said Helen to Warren quietly after they were alone once more. She did not intend to say another thing to Warren about the affair, but she was surprised when he turned to her, his face purple with rage.

"I never saw such a bunch of snobs," he stormed furiously. "Play bridge here, indeed! Well, I guess you won't. You're a game little sport," looking at her admiringly, "and you're the handsomest woman in the room, if you don't believe it, ask the country club. Come on, let's go home."

"I smile because I can't help it." "Dancing makes you normal."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE ladies of our club are going to have a dee-bating society each week till open soon, and Ma All we need now is sum subjecks. We have plenty of good speakers.

Here is one rite off the reel, sed Pa:

Resolved, that Wilson's policy in Mexico & the green wig for wimmen will soon be buried neeth the dark Tide of Oblivyun.

I dount like that vary well, sed Ma. Some of us ladies has used any cullured wigs at any time, & we dount know enuff about politicks to talk fer or aggenst anything the President does. What we want is sum subjecks about the hoam & fireside, sed Ma.

I dount see how any of you gil enuff time at yure hoam & fireside to know any more about it than you do about politicks, sed Pa. But let me see. How wud this do for a subjeck:

Resolved, that the tango & hesitashun waltz are not steps toward strivving for the infinite, un-attainabel & inutterabel.

I dount like that subjeck, either, sed Ma. That's how so many ack & ritten about them new dances that I am afrade the subjeck is worn out. You dud think of one or two subjecks, Ma sed, & I will sub-mit them to you. One of the subjecks is:

Resolved, that a man aggenst suffrage for wimmen is not a man. How do you like that for a subjeck?

I dount think much of it, sed Pa. How cud you git any wimmen to say that he is a man? Why dount you try this subjeck:

Resolved, that most of the reels grate names in history has been names of men & not wimmen.

That wud never do at all, sed Ma beekaus the wimmen do not resolve anything of the kind & wudent, even think of decbating over it. How about Jone of Ark & Barbary Fritchie & Maud Muller & Litel Lucy Gray? sed Ma. They aint balmie of men, are they?

Well, you & I stent deebating, sed Pa. I dount suppose it is any use for me to pick out any more subjecks for you. Every subjeck that I pick out seems to make you sirrus pure shoiders. It is hereby resolved that I wont do any more resolving for you, Pa sed. You will have to think of yure own subjecks. Then Pa got his cote & hat & went to his lodge meeting.

Any Grounds

"But what grounds has your father for objecting to me, dearest"

"He said any grounds within a mile of his house."

Do You Know That—

The chief of the police of the Berlin suburb of Schieneberg is anxious to diminish the number of people fined for petty offences in his district, many of them due to ignorance of local by-laws. Any one found by the police breaking these regulations for the first time is in future to be given a pamphlet drawing his attention to the offence committed instead of being prosecuted as hitherto.

A curious choir strike has occurred at Gebesee, in Thuringia, Germany. By an old custom the farm supplied the choir with 400 bottles of beer every year. The authorities compelled the beer and the choir immediately went on strike. The compensation complained. The town clerk and the church authorities met, and as a result it was decided to give the choir their 400 bottles of beer.

A voting contest has recently taken place in Germany to decide which are the seven wonders of the twentieth century. After an enormous volume of votes cast were counted it was found that the majority had placed wireless telegraphy at the head of the list, and the Panama Canal second. The third of the seven wonders, it was decided, is the dirigible airship, next in order were the flying machine, radium, the cinematograph and the steamship Vaterland.

A Message to Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 Lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative powers of the stomach, so they may learn to absorb the oils and fats and hand them along to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The fatty portion of the body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the assimilative canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this plain waste of fat-building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that has accomplished so much for conditions here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of solid, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and protruding joint. Your druggist has Sargol, or can get it from his wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

CAUTION—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.—Advertisement.

DOCTOR ORDERS RESINOL FOR BAD RINGWORM

New York, March 9, 1914: "A rash formed on my forehead and commenced spreading. It was a ringworm. The itching and burning which I endured for four months before I commenced using Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment were terrible. All my classmates kept away from me in fear that they would catch it. I tried every boss remedy I could think of, but with no success. My family doctor advised me to use Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. The second time I applied them I felt a cooling sensation which was lasting—the relief was quick. I used two cakes of Resinol Ointment, and Resinol Soap, and was finally rid of the pest. Today there isn't a single mark to show where I had the disease." (Signed) M. G. Ross, 273 Church St.

Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are also speedily effective for eczema, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, sores and many forms of piles. Sold by all druggists. For trial free, write to Dept. 27-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription otho—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of otho—double strength—from any of the Riker-Jaynes drug stores and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength otho as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

Ralph Congratulates Himself on His Good Fortune in Winning Edith's Promise.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XX.

RALPH MORTON would have denied the accusation that he was past master in the art of self-deception. Indeed, he had reached the point where he was so completely self-deceived that it was not difficult for him to believe that he dealt honestly with himself.

Therefore, he had not acknowledged to his own soul that his feeling for Edith was partly admiration of her beauty and affection of a sort, mingled with a desire for the good things of this world for which she stood. Yet away back in his mind was always the consciousness that she was the only child of a rich man.

When Tom had told Ralph of his engagement the younger man congratulated his cousin, but later he smiled cynically in remembering that "Tom had been foxy enough to fasten her own nest" well. The mixed metaphor did not disturb him. He was thinking of what he considered Tom's inconsistencies—not his own.

So tonight, while he chatted with the two girls whom he was escorting home, he was aware of a subtle feeling of triumph. He laughed at all the teasing remarks of his companions, although he refused with mock gravity to say anything about the bid of news of which Beatrice made much. Yet so merrily did he decline to discuss the subject that he left the girls in an uncertain state of mind as to just how much was true with regard to his engagement to Edith and whether or not they might pass on the interesting bit of information.

When they reached the Bruce house Ralph Morton sprang out and assisted his companions to alight; then, after escorting them up the steps to the front door, held on his hand to my good-night.

"But," Emily Bruce protested, "you must let my man take you home, Mr. Morton. You are a mile away from your own house."

He laughingly declined. "Thank you ever so much," he replied, "but really I would like a walk in this wonderful moonlight. I shall sleep better for doing so."

He was glad to be alone again as he strode along the asphalted road stretching between the Bruce estate and his mother's place. He had much to think of. He could hardly realize as the culmination of his dreams of happiness and success—years which had brought about at last the engagement of his cousin to the woman for whom he had longed—here in fact was at last the betrothed of the one girl in all the world whom he wished to marry!

Had not Pate played into his hand, and he, Ralph, determined that he would profit by it?

The figure reminded him with a disagreeable jar of his last game of cards; of the money he had lost and of Tom's having paid his debt for him. The reminder was not an agreeable one, and he determined that he would refund that money at once.

He gnawed the end of his mustache as he considered how little ready money he had at his command. His mother, although an invalid, had never laid down the reins of power. She was not rich, and while she was perfectly willing to give Ralph such funds as he told her he needed, she would not let him manage her moderate income. She did not live extravagantly herself, yet she had brought up her son in comfort and luxury.

John Hale had been right in saying that Ralph "played at law." There was always some excuse for his not working hard—an excuse which his fond parent was ever ready to accept, for she liked to keep her boy at home and near her. To this end she had given him last year an automobile runabout, and since he had owned this he had gone to his office more seldom than before.

When he expressed a wish for anything she would ask him what it would cost, then give him the money with which to buy it, but except upon the many occasions when he turned larger sums than he needed, he had no money of his own. That he did not hesitate to sacrifice truth when talking to his mother was due the fact that he sometimes had funds to spend in ways of which she would have approved.

To have money doled out to him as he needs it by any woman—be she mother or wife—weakens the ambition and lessens the self-respect of any man unless he be exceptionally strong and independent. Ralph Morton had reached the deplorable state where he did not object to receiving money from his mother, but accepted it as his due.

Would it not all come to him anyway when she died? Therefore, he felt under no especial obligations to her. She was only giving him in advance a bit of that which would some time be altogether his own.

Now, walking along the deserted streets of Homewood he appreciated that if he was to pay his financial debt to Tom Morton he must invent some plausible tale to tell his mother. He was pretty sure that he could trust his ready wits to prompt him along this line.

First of all, he would surprise her by the announcement of his engagement to Edith. He knew, of course, that she would be pleased. He was glad to think of that, for he did not feel self-satisfied to reflect that through him a joy was coming into her life.

He found himself eager to talk the matter over with her and quickened his pace to reach home sooner. He decided that a little of pleasurable anticipation as he turned in at his gate that there was a light still burning in his mother's room. She often lay in bed and read until toward midnight. She evidently had been doing this tonight and was therefore awake. Perhaps she had been hoping he would come home in time to talk with her before he slept.

Fitting his key into the latch he entered the house and closed the door softly behind him. But he had evidently made no sound that had not heard him.

"Ralph!" she called from her room. "Yes, mother!" he called back blithely.

"I'm awake and waiting for you!" she said. "Come on upstairs, dear-est!"

WHOLE NATION MOURNS WITH PRESIDENT OVER DEATH OF WIFE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A pall of sadness hangs over the White House and over all of Washington today because of the death of the first lady of the land. At the main entrance to the Executive Mansion black crepe told of the sorrow within and the gates of the White House grounds were closed. All the flags in the city were at half-staff, and only a few clerks, those absolutely necessary for business, were at work in the executive offices.

FAMILY IN SECLUSION.

Washington has not recovered from the shock of Mrs. Wilson's death. President Wilson and his daughters remained in grief-stricken seclusion in the White House, the former denying himself to all except his family and his secretary. The funeral at the White House will be private, it was officially announced today, but the time has not yet been fixed. It will probably be held Monday. It is expected that Mrs. Wilson will be buried at Rome, Ga., or in Princeton, where she spent so many years while her distinguished husband was president of the university.

Word came to the White House today that Mrs. Wilson's only sister, Mrs. Edward Elliott, is ill in California, and will be unable to come to Washington for the services. Her brother, Professor Stockton Axson, is on his way to Washington and is expected tomorrow. E. R. T. Brown of Atlanta, a cousin of Mrs. Wilson, and of George Howe of North Carolina, a nephew, arrived at the White House today.

MANY TELEGRAMS.

The President is more deeply affected today by the death of his wife than he was yesterday. He is bracing himself, however, to take up the duties of his office again at the earliest possible moment.

Hundreds of telegrams and letters of sympathy are arriving at the White House hourly. It is the President's desire that business in the Senate and House of Representatives should not be interrupted by reason of Mrs. Wilson's death and inquiries at the White House regarding possible adjournment brought forth a negative reply.

After visiting the White House to tender his condolences on the death of Mrs. Wilson, Senator Kern of Indiana, Democratic floor leader in the Senate, said that no final action would be taken by the Senate with reference to the appointment of a committee to attend the funeral until the details of the ceremony were completed.

The Senate will adjourn on the day of the funeral, and all the government departments will be closed on that day. Collection will be taken up in the Senate today to purchase a wreath to be sent by the upper House of Congress.

Mrs. Wilson was the third wife of a President to die in the White House. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison died on October 25, 1892. Mrs. John Tyler also died there.

The death of Mrs. Wilson came after an interval of twenty-two years without a death in the immediate family of the executive in the mansion. The last death of a member of the presidential family in the White House was that of the Rev. John Witherspoon Scott, the venerable father-in-law of President Harrison. It was but five weeks before that the wife of President Harrison, Caroline Scott Harrison, passed away after a long illness.

Although Mrs. Woodrow Wilson had spent only a few months of active social life in the White House, she had endeared herself to scores of Washingtonians with whom she became intimately acquainted. She was the first wife of a President to visit the slums of Washington and to take steps to bring about an amelioration of conditions. Only yesterday the "alley" bill, which she so vigorously advocated, was passed by the Senate in response to her dying wish. It will be passed by the House in the near future.

When Mrs. Wilson came to Washington she was a strong, vigorous woman, and, despite the exacting social duties she assumed, it was not until she had a severe fall in the lobby of the White House that her health began to fail. She slowly grew weaker, and when she died she was thin and worn and nothing like the bright, strong and charming woman who became the first lady of the land scarcely sixteen months ago.

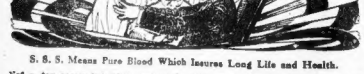
A Great Triumph Over Blood Disorders

The Stubborn Facts That Establish The Merit of Famous Remedy.



S. S. S. Means Pure Blood Which Insures Long Life and Health.

Not a day passes but what someone announces his complete recovery from some lingering blood malady, after using S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. And these recoveries vary from severe forms of eczema and other skin diseases to those which attack the deeper tissues, causing internal pains, chronic rheumatism, glandular swellings and all sorts of painful, distressing and eruptive conditions of the blood.

The action of S. S. S. is entirely in the blood as it is not a mere laxative, not a "dope" for the nerves, contains no mineral of any sort, is acceptable to the weakest stomach and is always the same forceful influence. Its properties are such that the most remedies the system needs, resists its action but welcomes it. Thus from the time it is first used until complete recovery it is the same dominating force in the blood and cannot produce any other than a most beneficial effect and continuous curative tendency. Where the general health is fairly good, the rapidity with which S. S. S. clears the skin of unsightly eruptions or banishes the pains of rheumatism, has been commented upon by physicians, chemists and overjoyed patients as truly remarkable. And even in those severe types of blood disease where its ravages have been a torture for years the improvement that has taken place after a short use of S. S. S. has long been a wonder that nature should have given us so remarkable and perfect an antidote.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores, but carefully avoid all substitutes. Wrapped around the bottle is a descriptive folder that tells you about the famous free medical department that has been the hope, the inspiration and the successful guidance of a host of sufferers. For a special treatise on blood troubles written by a skilled doctor, write The Swift Specific Co., 99 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Making Small Display Advertisements Pays

The Experience of Two Haberdashers

TWO men in New York—gifted retailers with small capital—decided they would go into business and specialize in the sale of haberdashery.

They opened one small store. Their stock consisted of a well-chosen line of shirts, neckwear, hosiery and other accessories of men's wear.

They didn't advertise in the beginning. But they met with enough success to convince them they had selected a ripe field for profit, providing they could acquaint enough discriminating men and women with their existence and the standard of merchandise they carried.

They used the mails—sending literature to a picked list of names—but their sales did not increase as fast as they wanted them to.

Newspaper advertising was suggested to them. They shunned it—were afraid of it—didn't understand how they could afford it until it was explained how they could reach hundreds of thousands at the price they were paying to reach thousands.

Finally they were influenced to try it—in a very small, inexpensive way.

Their distrust and their doubts immediately vanished. They secured encouraging results from the first series of advertisements inserted—small three and four-inch displays, one column wide.

This concern has been advertising ever since. Today its sign is over eleven New York stores. There is scarcely a newspaper reader in Greater New York who does not know of the exclusive men's shops conducted under the firm name of Weber & Heilbroner.

These shops are famous for the splendid character of their merchandise and the moderateness of their prices.

They sell more than a million dollars' worth of haberdashery each year and their business is improving all the time.

Four years ago small clothing and hat departments were added to some of these stores. Today they are doing a million dollars in clothes alone and a hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year in hats.

Weber & Heilbroner is a concern which believes in small display advertisements, knowing that these are what helped pave the way to its present-day success.

In the Weber & Heilbroner stores there are no idle clerks—no lights burning uselessly—no space is being wasted.

They utilize every facility paid for, because they advertise—not big, but persistently and consistently.

And because they advertise, they have won renown for selling worthy merchandise at prices which make it advantageous for people to patronize them.

That is what small display advertisements have done for Weber & Heilbroner. This concern discovered that small, yet persistent, advertisements command generous reading—that they create a favorable familiarity in the minds of readers for the goods advertised—that they bring ready-to-buy customers into their stores.

There are scores of stores and specialty shops in Boston that can increase their patronage and profit through advertising.

The experiences of others prove that they really can't afford to ignore advertising—that they can't make the most of their opportunities unless they advertise.

Advertising is not a tremendous undertaking. The primary requirements are reliable and desirable merchandise and efficient storekeeping—a complete knowledge of store-service and an organization capable of rendering it.

Then the determination to try advertising—in the American. Four inches single or double column every other day may be enough to start with.

Don't think of the cost. Think of the money you are losing now through wasted rent, light, clerk hire, etc.—all capable of greater production. Think of the increased business advertising will bring. Keep your mind on the goal—no! on the path that leads to it.

Make your start in the American because in this way you can reach Boston's ablest buyers—an alert, prosperous people who are susceptible to advertising's appeal.

Start small if you will—but start.

Try it a season and note results.

You can increase your space as your business increases.

Through the American you can reach more than 400,000 responsive readers daily—most of whom have need for the very thing you sell.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON AUGUST 7, 1914

The people of the United States sympathize deeply with the President in the grief that afflicts him today.

Chosen by the people to execute their laws, express their will and bear the burden of anxiety that goes with executive office, Woodrow Wilson in the sorrow that falls upon himself and his children has the sympathy of every human being in this country.

His load of care and anxiety of individual and public responsibility has been heavy.

He has borne the burden well and has kept locked in his own heart the personal and family grief made public today.

The nation knows that his greatest happiness in being chosen to lead the nation was the happiness that it gave to the friend, companion and mother of whom he and his children are now bereft.

Black are the clouds that hover over the nations.

Black the future and uncertain the road of human progress.

But for the moment the people of this land have forgotten all the tragedy of the nations, all their own interests.

And the national heart turns with one thought to that bedside in the White House, where a man bowed with care and responsibility sits with his head in his hands and feels that all of life is ended.

Get the American Ships! That Is the First Vital Step

Amid all the crowding complications which beset the problem of providing a merchant marine and transporting American produce across the waiting and commercially empty seas, one thing appears to embody clear common sense.

GET READY THE SHIPS TO DO THE WORK!

Sooner or later the necessities of nations must remove the difficulties of reaching them.

One way or the other, naval supremacy in this world war must speedily be determined. The bulk of the English and the German navies are now practically face to face in the North Sea. They are there to fight, and they must fight soon, and to a finish. When that fight is done the status of our Atlantic commerce will be made clear.

The question is, Shall we dawdle now and hesitate and delay so that we will be no better prepared then than now to meet our opportunities?

Or shall the whole force of a practical and powerful government be set toward the inevitable work of getting the ships and making them our ships?

It is just as easy to do this now as to rush madly about when the time comes looking for the ships that will be as free to cross the Atlantic and the Pacific as they are the Gulf of Mexico.

We have two commercial problems in this emergency.

The FIRST PROBLEM IS TO GET THE SHIPS. What are we doing in this direction? Have we done anything so far? What is our plan?

It is a reasonably safe proposition that by the time our ships, American owned, are ready for their work, their work will be ready for them.

The supremacy of the Atlantic Ocean will in all human probability have been decided between Germany and England within a month.

The question of money and payment for our products shipped must necessarily be settled also.

In this national commercial emergency the AMERICAN would like to see Congress take positive and heroic methods to SOLVE THE FIRST PROBLEM OF FINDING SHIPS to carry American commerce in this stirring time, and in the equally important periods that are to follow it.

For whether by a high commission with power to act, or by joint resolution executed by an expert committee, it is high time that the merchant marine, no longer a merely desirable, but now an absolutely necessary thing, should be born at once.

The War's Striking Lesson in Government Ownership

Owning her own telephone and telegraph lines, England has taught this country an important lesson in the practicability of government ownership

England does not own her railroads. But with the declaration of war came an order placing every railroad in the United Kingdom under the absolute control of the government.

Time tables will be made by the government, trains will be run as the government says that they shall be run; every railroad employe, from the new Long Island general manager of the most important line down to the humblest guard on a passenger train, will take his orders from the government.

The purpose of this is obvious.

The interests of the English people are at stake in this war. Private gain must be sacrificed to the common good. It is not for boards of directors but for the representatives of the people to say how England's means of transportation are to be conducted in this crisis.

The process of taking over the railroads is necessarily long and cumbersome. It will take some time before government officials, untrained in the management of railroads, can operate them smoothly. For weeks, perhaps months, they will be largely dependent on the railroad operators themselves.

BUT HAD ENGLAND OWNED AND OPERATED HER OWN RAILROADS, AS SHE OWNS AND OPERATES HER OWN TELEGRAPH LINES, NO CHANGE WOULD HAVE BEEN NECESSARY.

THE RAILROAD DEPARTMENT, OPERATING IN COMPLETE HARMONY WITH THE WAR DEPARTMENT, WOULD HAVE BEEN INSTANTLY RESPONSIVE TO THE DEMAND UPON IT.

In the event of war in America an order like that enforced in England would have to be made. Here it would take a weary time to bring the railroads into complete harmony with the government. Clashes of ideas and opinions would be bound to occur. A condition approaching chaos would exist for the first few months, at least.

Here is an important lesson for the people of America. The worst calamity that can befall a nation is a great war. The next worst calamity is the inability of a nation to defend itself, to protect its people in time of a great war.

With railroads under hundreds of different private managements, the immediate transportation of troops would be a manifest impossibility. There would be a shortage of cars here, a lack of facilities there, a difference between employer and employes at another place.

Under government ownership the railroads would be as responsive as the army and navy, the telegraph system would be a part of the government, and as available as the postal service is to the government now.

In time of peace the government control of railroads and telegraphs and telephones would be a boon to the people. In time of war it would be an imperative necessity.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Somebody Is Libelled; That's a Cinch

Now that Mr. Barnes has sued Colonel Roosevelt for libel on the ground that the Colonel says Barnes' methods are worse than Murphy's, it seems to be up to Murphy to sue Barnes for libel on the ground that he has brought such a suit.

Shaky Claim

A Connecticut man wants $30,000 for supplies furnished by his ancestors to Washington's army. History is against him. If Washington's army had ever had $30,000 worth of supplies it would have won the revolution in seven days instead of seven years.

Just to Make Sure

Judging by the cases of Warburg and Jones, it might be wiser for Mr. Wilson not to nominate the successor to Judge Lurton till the Senate has first confirmed him.

The Price Will Go Up, Anyway

The record production of anthracite was made in 1913, and the mine owners will have to increase prices because it cost more to handle so much of it.

An Interview With the Dove of Peace

THEY'VE shot the feathers off him,
They've busted both his wings,
They've closed one eye and he is shy
An awful lot of things.
If he should hop up to you,
You'd run and yell "Police!"
He looks so grim, and yet it's him—
The same old Dove of Peace.

HIS face is lined with anguish
His form is lank and lean;
The only food he's lately chewed
Is nitro-glycerine.
He's lost his mild expression,
He's lost his gentle coo,
To state the fact in terms exact
He's pretty nearly through.

AND yet when last I saw him
To my surprise I found
His heart was light and he was quite Well pleased at sticking round.
"Things well might be much worser,"
He croaked, and then he winked;
"If the world was ran on Bryan's plan—
Well, I'd be plumb extinct."

The Pity of It

George Fred Williams resigned in order to be free to talk. What a pity that the Secretary of State was not confronted with the same stern necessity.

There's No Place Like Home

For the next few months, at any rate, we shall not be eaten up with envy when we go down to bid farewell to friends bound for European tours.

Like the Light Brigade Survivors

What a splendid merchant marine we could make if we could get together all the first ships to pass through the Panama Canal!

Unduly Precipitate

It seemed unwise for Austria to plunge headlong into this trouble without making any disposition of the moving picture rights.

Curiosities

The only people in Europe who are looking for peace just now are the White Hopes we have sent over there.

Progress

BUSINESS MEN AT MR. WILSON'S EAR.—Headline.

This is a slight improvement. But yesterday they were in his hair.

No Job for a Yodler

Now that international complications are too big for parlor diplomacy a lot of people would be just as well satisfied if the President released Mr. Bryan permanently to the Chatauqua circuit and signed on a Secretary of State.

Not the Right Element

It becomes more and more apparent that the ocean is no place for ships.

How to Build the Brain —Constant Thoughts of Hope, Courage, Love, Faith, Hatred, Wealth, Usefulness, Beauty and Good Will Are Essential

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

EVERY teacher and preacher tells us to think good thoughts, to do good deeds, to abstain from wrong thinking and wrong acting, and to love our enemies and do good to those who despitefully use us.

They tell us to control the mind.

But they do not tell us HOW to do this from the time we rise until we sleep, and even after we sleep.

The mind is like a wild colt, and he who undertakes to break a wild colt to the bit needs to know something about horses and horse training.

Here is a little formula for the beginning of mind control. When you rise in the morning give your very first thought to the Great Power which has brought you to the threshold of another day. Say mentally a little prayer of gratitude. "Thank You, Great Creator, for life and hope," will serve every purpose.

Even if you are despondent and do not feel hope in your heart, say the words, because hope is really in your heart, whether you feel it or not. A being absolutely without hope could not live. While you are dressing think of Hope, Courage, Love, Faith, Health, Wealth, Usefulness and Good Will.

Think of Beauty, too, and Youth. Refuse absolutely to permit your mind to occupy itself with thoughts of trouble and sickness. As you mingle with your fellows, whether in your family, or in your place of business, pick out some agreeable topic of conversation rather than one depressing and unpleasant.

In these times there is much written and said about efficiency, and about the conserving of our time and energies, in eliminating wasteful methods from our business. A wonderful system has been inaugurated where bricklayers and carpenters can accomplish three times the labor with one-half the effort, just by avoiding unnecessary movements and economizing time and energy.

The same can be done with the mind.

To each of us is given a certain amount of mental energy—of nervous force by filling ALL our lungs with fresh air many times a day, and by understanding and employing the LAW OF CONCENTRATION in the use of our minds.

Or we can deplete those precious forces by breaking the laws of health in diet, postures of the body, and habits of wasteful thought. It is a wicked misuse of thought to allow your mind to dwell on the unpleasant things in your own life or in the universe.

It is wicked to think of troubles which are past, to fear troubles which may come, to worry over the future, and to wonder why Providence does not arrange affairs differently.

Mental efficiency does not follow such methods of thinking.

Intelligent men and women frequently scatter their forces by criticisms of the Power which permits the helpless invalids and the criminal and the insane to live, while the young and happy and strong and useful are taken away.

Over and over we hear these comments and complaints. Of what avail are they?

And who can say that the time had not come for the passing onward of any soul that goes, however young and happy and needed it may seem to us?

Such use of our mental energies is wrong and foolish.

It is brain destroying, not brain building.

Keep all your thoughts for some constructive purpose.

The moment you feel your mind going off on a senseless, useless tangent draw in the reins as you would draw them were you riding a refractory horse heading for a ditch.

Say to your foolish thought of fear, or gloom, or doubt, or worry, "Get thee behind me, Satan, thou art not of God, and I will have none of thee." Repeat wholesome words—Love, Peace, Attainment, Success, Opulence and Usefulness." And when you fall asleep at night, think of the Invisible Helpers as ministering Angels who will come and build your brain as you desire it to be and sleep in peace.
